3) Main Project

(1) Project on the Foundation of North East Asian Studies

The aim of this project is to lay the foundation for North East Asian Studies. This is pursued through Seminar on North East Asia, which is held about six times a year.

(2) Research Project on the History of Exchange between Japan and Korean Peninsula

This project academically analyzes historical and international relations between Japan and South /North Korea from broad perspectives, in order to promote exchanges in North East Asia around and beyond Japan and the Korean Peninsula. Research seminar on History of Exchange between Japan and Korea is organized four times a year.

(3) Researches on North East Asian Region

In order to approach the issues surrounding the foundation of North East Asian Studies from wider point of view, our members set up some research groups, acquiring internal and external funding, and pursue unique researches in various areas.

4) Research Units

Since the academic year 2013, NEAR Center has employed a "research unit" system as a matrix that promotes joint research projects. There are three units: a "history, culture, and thought" unit, a "politics, economics, and international relation" unit, and a "cross-boundary of northeastern Asia" unit. With this system, we have been making efforts to build a more organic framework for research. We are launching international research unit on documents of Mongolian history this year.

5) Other Research Activities

(1) Trans-Area Studies on Asia/ Publishing of Series of Initiative Learning on North-east Asia

In collaboration with NEAR Center, Graduate School at the University of Shimane can offer a unique doctoral program in "Trans-Area Studies on North East Asia." In order to strengthen our postgraduate education, the researchers at NEAR Center conduct researches, taking into account the conception of the "trans-area". North East Asian World has been formed through various historical developments and wide interactions of people, things, and cultures. Our researchers examine this region in the context of globalization from interdisciplinary point of view. The achievements of those researches are published as "A Series of Initiative Learning on North-east Asia." (All the publication process completed for total 5 volumes in the annual year 2020).

(2) Research on Nishi Amane

Nishi Amane, who were born in Tsuwano, is a philosopher who contributed to the development of Japanese modernity from the end of Edo period to Meiji era, by bringing in various thoughts from the West and Asia. NEAR Center organizes a research group on his thought, and the outcome has been published in 2005 as 『西周と日本の近代』(ペリカン社、2005年) (Nishi Amane and Japanese Modernity (2005, Pericansha)). Symposia and seminars are held jointly with local residents in Tsuwano in Autumn every year.

3. Working with Postgraduate School

Research Associate Program at NEAR Center

Under this program, excellent graduate students at our doctoral course are appointed as Research Associates, and their researches are actively supported by the Center. Research Associates receive three-year research funding, and the researches carried out under this scheme can get credited toward their degree.

4. Partnership with Local Community

1) Citizen Researcher Program at NEAR Center

The origin of Citizen Researcher Program traces back to the graduate courses called “NEAR College.” The course was established right after the graduate school was founded and its purpose was to break ground on graduate studies. There were a lot of outstanding and experienced human resources who are already in the real world. Because of this, the program was officially launched in 2006 as a part of Good Practice project funded by Ministry of Education (MEXT). In and around Shimane, there are many local residents who are equipped with rich experience and valuable knowledge. In order to stimulate postgraduate students’ research and learning by fully utilizing such resources, NEAR Center invites local residents to register as “citizen researchers”, and to conduct researches jointly with our researchers and postgraduate students. It is a very unique and highly acclaimed program in the country.

2) Detailed Activities of Citizen Researcher Program

(1) General Meeting and Research Forum

General meetings and research conferences are a place for citizen researchers, NEAR Center researchers, and graduate students to get together and to discuss the management of the program, as well as the plans and ideas for the future activities. It is also designed to be a forum of discuss where the research outcomes of citizen researchers are presented and discussed. Meetings may include presentations by citizen researchers, reports of joint research between citizen researchers and postgraduate students, and group discussion.

(2) Group Research Salon

The Salon is a gathering where citizen researchers organize their own research groups and conduct joint research, while intensively exchanging information with each other, as well as with NEAR Center researchers and postgraduate students. This has been the core of the Program since the year 2012, and it is expected that creative activities are made possibly by organically linking citizen researchers, NEAR Center, and postgraduate students.

(3) Joint Research by Citizen Researchers and Postgraduate Students

This is a unique feature of our “Citizen Researcher Program”. Postgraduate students organize their own research groups with citizen researchers and NEAR Center researchers, and some excellent and viable researches are funded by the Center. Two joint researches got funded in the last annual year, and research topics from the past two years include the followings.
